

Tennessee By the Numbers

Non-STEM and STEM Tenured or Tenure Track Faculty at Tennessee-Knoxville

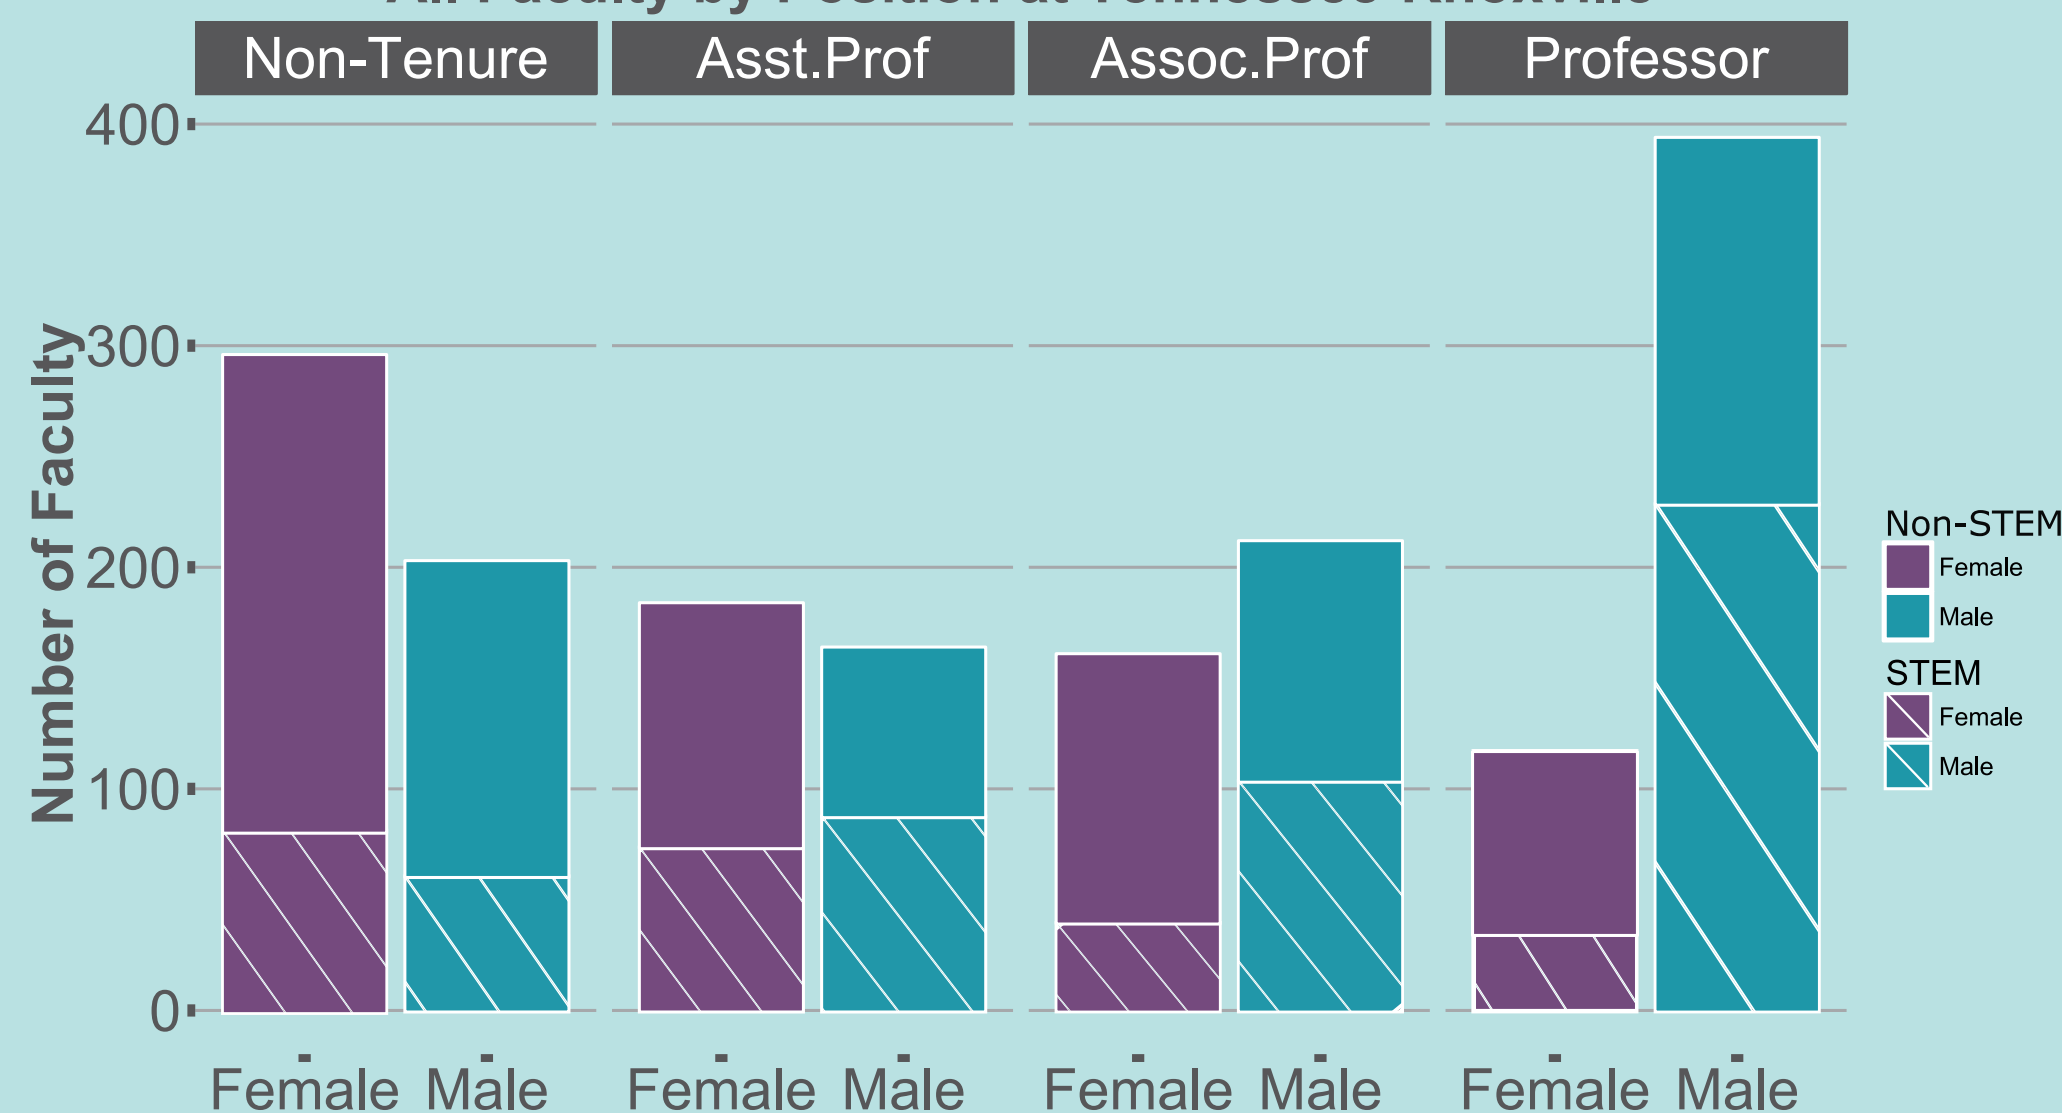

Nationally, women hold 32% of all tenure and tenure-track positions in STEM

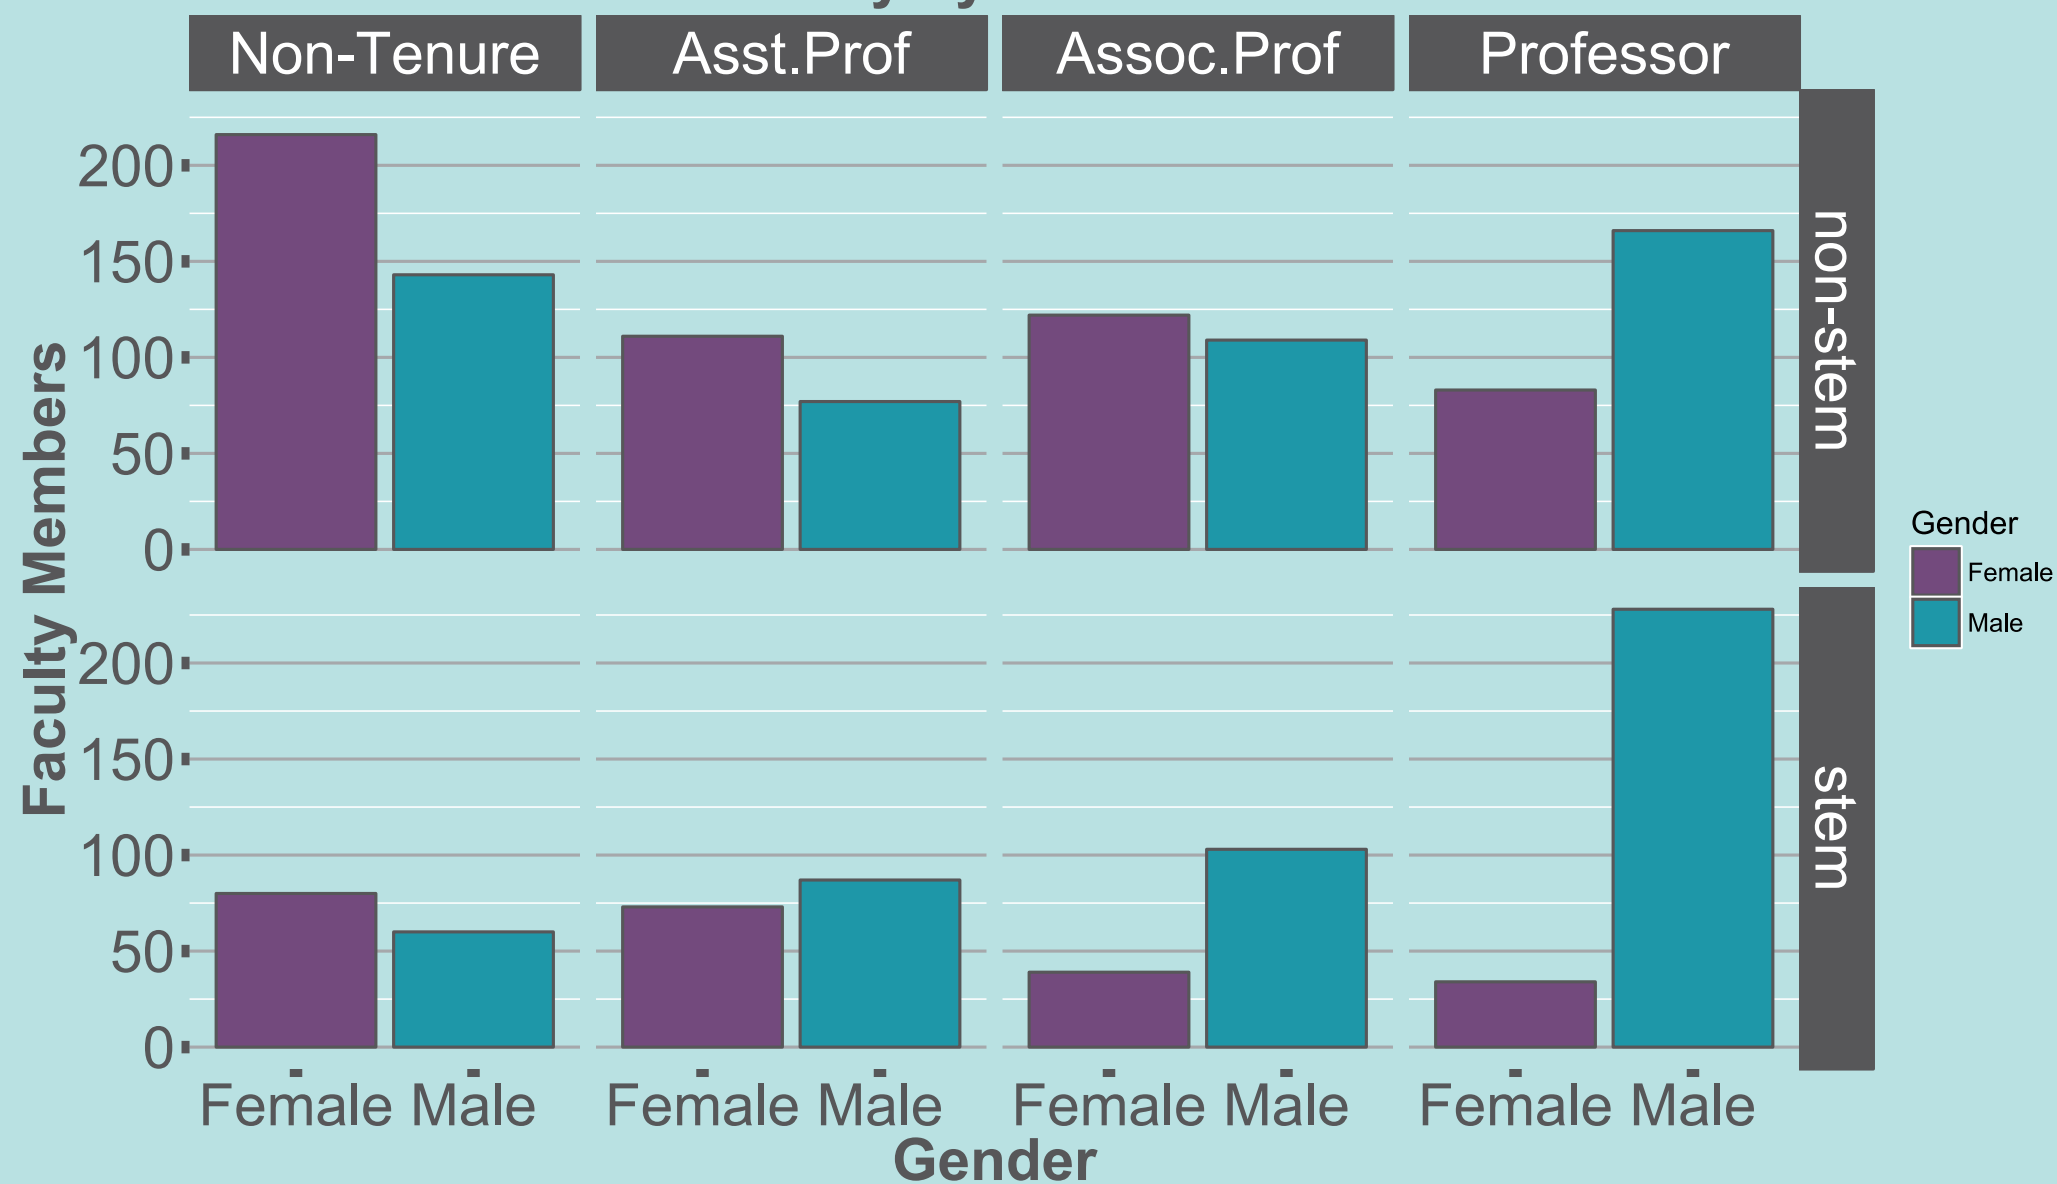

Broadly, higher proportion of female faculty hold associate and assistant professor roles than men

Statistic from NSF's NSF 15-311 2015 Report on Women, Minorities, and Persons with Disabilities in STEM, Table 9-22

All Faculty by Position at Tennessee-Knoxville

Non-STEM and STEM Faculty by Position at Tennessee-Knoxville

When you break out by STEM and non-STEM, a fewer proportion of women hold prominent positions

2015-2016 STEM Faculty by Gender at Tennessee-Knoxville

Find out the numbers in your department →

At the University of Tennessee Knoxville, women hold fewer faculty positions and fewer full-time tenured and tenure-track positions than the national average. Future directions of the Committee include:

- gender distributions of undergraduate and graduate enrollment and graduation rates in STEM fields
- gender distributions of undergraduate and graduate enrollment and graduation rates by STEM departments